

Sorry I am not submitting my name, but I hate to see my comments archived in Google and available online.

Basically, my only question in all of this is why is it that they expect you, the FCC, to enforce something that could easily request of the manufacturers.

Is it really the FCC's responsibility to deal with something that could settled upon by the two industries alone?